IMPORTANCE OF

The Mishnah (Yuma 85b) states: האימר אחטא ואשוב - if one says "I will sin, and then I will do Teshuvah [for it]", he will be deprived of the opportunity to do Teshuvah. In what way is such a person worse than one who sins with no intention of doing Teshuvah? Does he not at least have a מחשבה טובה - a good intention to atone for his sin? The Gemara (Bava Metzia 30a) states that if a bird landed on a Parah Adumah, the cow is still Kosher for use as a Parah Adumah, even though the Torah says that no "עול" (yoke, including other forms of burden) may be allowed on it. Why? Because the owner certainly doesn't want the bird to sit on his cow, and the Torah only disqualifies based on labor with the owner's acquiescence. However, if the Parah Adumah mated with a bull, it is no longer Kosher because this is something the owner favors. Tosafos asks: wouldn't the owner argue that he would never favor such a thing if he will lose the tremendous value of a Parah Adumah thereby? Tosafos answers that if the cow were to remain Kosher in such a case, the owner would definitely favor the activity. The Shitah Mekubetzes quotes the Ra'N who explains that the owner is always interested in the mating, but will only allow it if the cow will remain Kosher. As such, allowing it to stay Kosher would only encourage the disqualifying act. This cannot be allowed. The Panim Masbiros explains that where one says אחטא ואשוב, he is also relying on the possibility of Teshuvah in order to sin. If he believed that he would be unable to do Teshuvah, he would presumably not do the חטא. Therefore, since the Torah would never encourage him to sin, the opportunity to repent must be taken away from him.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK:

How might a Kohen become טמא מת through associating with a live person who is himself not טמא?

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK:

(When could one live somewhere, but only for free?)

The Gemara (Kidushin 12b) states that Rav would administer lashes to one who lived in his father-in-law's house, to prevent inappropriate interaction with the mother-in-law. Tosafos notes that today it is permitted if he can live in the house rent-free, for as such it is clear that he is not living there to be near his mother-in-law, but rather to save money.

DIN'S CORNER:

If one intends to participate in a Siyum on Erev Pesach, he should make sure to eat some of the meal that is given to celebrate the Siyum. Otherwise, he may not eat later. If he has completed the subject matter himself, he may delay his שמחה and eat later, if he wishes. One may make a Siyum on a Navi only if he had been studying it all along, and on a Masechta, even if he learned it especially for Erev Pesach. (Teshuvos V'Hanhagos 1:300)

DID YOU KNOW THAT

The Gemara (Avodah Zarah 52b) asks if the כלים used by Chonio (son of Shimon HaTzadik, who ran off to Egypt, built his own illegal מזבה and offered קרבנות) could be used in the Beis HaMikdash. Rav Sheshes says no, offering proof from the fact that the Chashmonaim put away (were גזרו) the stones from the מזבה after the Greeks had defiled them, even though an idolater can normally not appropriate a Jew's property and make it אסור as זרה simply by worshiping with it. Still, in matters of גבוה (those things owned by הקדש), the רבנן apparently decreed that improper handling did disqualify it. Rav Papa rebuts this proof, citing a Posuk: ובאו בה פריצים וחללוהו - the enemy will enter and profane it, which results in the conversion of all desecrated Beis HaMikdash כלים into חולין (non-sacred). The Greeks could then acquire them and turn them into זרה with worship. However, where כלים were not actually profaned, there was no basis for not permitting their use. Igros Moshe (4:63) cites a Midrash which states that Hashem swore never to allow the destruction of the Kosel HaMaaravi because the Shechinah is always there. As such, the Kosel never lost its sanctity, despite the Churban, and it is therefore forbidden for anyone to take a "piece" from the Kosel, even as a souvenir. The Rambam (יסוה"ת 6:7) rules that one may not remove even one stone from the Beis HaMikdash unless in the process of making an improvement. The Rema (152) adds that the same rule applies to a בית הכנסת, where the TAZ goes so far as to forbid attaching a Shtender to the wall where a hole or groove is made in the wall to anchor it. (MB says that most Acharonim are lenient and allow it)

A Lesson Can Be Learned From:

The Subalker Rov, R' Yechiel Mechel Heller was a renowned Talmid Chocho'm whose opinions and advice were sought by many. His grandfather was quite wealthy when young, owning a very successful business. Unfortunately, his success aroused jealousy. Once, when he had to leave town on business, he arranged for his daughter, a fine and capable young lady, to manage the store in his absence. Some unscrupulous people seized the opportunity to spread a false and vicious rumor, accusing her of improper behavior. As a result, it became very difficult for her father to marry her off. As time went on and she grew older, he became more and more desperate until finally he told her that he was prepared to arrange a שידוך for her with the son of the local Baal Agalah (wagon driver), an ignorant and simple young man. Sorely disappointed at the prospect of marrying an Am HaAretz, she nevertheless obeyed her father and the שידוך was arranged. Before the Chupah, the young lady was מתפלל, asking Hashem, who knew that she was innocent and wronged, to at least provide her with children who would be Tzadikim and Talmidei Chachomim. She was זוכה to sons and sons-in-law who served as great Rabonim throughout Europe.
