IMPORTANCE OF

The Gemara (Horios 12a) quotes Abaye as saying that since we cannot deny that an omen is significant, one should therefore make sure to see on Rosh HaShanah a gourd, a fenugreek, a leek, beets and dates. The Gemara (Kerisus 5b) replaces the words "to see" with "to eat". The Shulchan Aruch (א"ח 583:1) lists the same foods, placing gourd as the last food, instead of first, like the Gemara has it. The Beis Yosef explains that all the others imply a good omen with their Hebrew name itself, while the gourd is eaten on Rosh HaShanah only because it grows quickly. The Divrei Yatziv (א"ח 252) cites the Gemara (Nedarim 49a) which relates that when R' Yirmiyahu was ill, a doctor came to treat him. When the doctor saw a gourd in the house, he said "the Malach HaMaves is in the house, and I should heal him !?" Thus, if eating a gourd is detrimental to one's health, it belongs at best, at the end of the list. Since some other foods on the list can also seemingly be interpreted negatively, Rav Hai Gaon made a point of establishing a special Nusach to be said with each. The Divrei Yatziv suggests that the various listed foods may have changed since the time of the Gemara, and the circumstances under which they grew is not always known. As such, since we say special Tefilos for each of them, perhaps we would be better off just saying the Tefilos, without actually having to eat them. The Maharsha states that the purpose of the Gemara is to permit the consumption of these foods as omens, without transgressing the prohibition of לא תנשו (do not practice divination). However, if we were to avoid eating them for potentially negative omens, we would transgress לא תנשו. As such, given the choice, one should arrange and eat the listed foods as a סמנה טובה.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK:

If we don't have to check our Tefillin everyday before saying the berachos, why do we check the Tzitzis on our Talis ?

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK:

(If one gave איסור הנאה to a Goy, how could he avoid תחנם ?)

The Rosh (Kidushin 2:31) permits selling איסור הנאה to a Goy. Perhaps he holds like the Rashba & Ralbag who limit תחנם to actual idolaters. However, most Poskim hold that איסור הנאה shouldn't be given to a Goy, as acceptance alone is deemed הנאה.

DIN'S CORNER:

One may not speak after the berachos are said over the Shofar, until the last Tekiah is blown, except for important things that concern the davening or the blowing of the Shofar. In other areas where one may not interrupt, such as Birchos Krias Shema, one may also not say the brocho of Asher Yotzar after relieving oneself until after finishing the Shemona Esrei because the wait until after Shemona Esrei is not too long. But if one relieved oneself during Musaf Chazoras HaShatz, before the last Tekiah, one may say Asher Yotzar immediately. (Tzitz Eliezer 11:45)

DID YOU KNOW THAT

The Rambam (Rosh HaShanah 1:6) states that a Shofar is invalid if plated with gold on the inside, or on the mouthpiece. The Magid Mishna cites the Ramban who considers gold on the mouthpiece to be a Hefsek. Accordingly, the Ramban derives that if one blew into a valid Shofar from an inch away, it is also invalid as a Hefsek. The Avnei Nezer (א"ח 432) asks: Is not gold on the mouthpiece a Chatzitza (interposition) problem ? One could hardly say there is a Chatzitza when blowing into a Shofar. In fact, the Gemara (Zevachim 19a), discusses a Kohen's garments and the requirement of על בשרו – that there may be nothing between the garment and the Kohen's body. The Gemara asks, what if the wind blew into the Kohen's garments, causing them to billow a little. Since they would not actually be על בשרו, would the Avodah be Posul, or is this deemed a normal way to wear clothing ? Clearly, the Gemara does not consider air to be a Chatzitza. If so, why should blowing into the Shofar be invalid ? The Avnei Nezer answers that in truth, gold on the Shofar mouthpiece is not a Chatzitza, because of the rule (Succah 37a) that anything whose purpose it is to beautify the object, does not interpose. However, the Shofar requires, as the Mishna Berurah (586:75) states: שיהא פיו מודבק בשופר – a physical connection between the Shofar and one's mouth. Thus, even if the gold does not create a Chatzitza, it still prevents one's mouth from touching the Shofar, which is therefore Posul. So too, where one blew into the Shofar from an inch away, there is no Chatzitza, but it is still invalid due to the lack of a physical connection.

A Lesson Can Be Learned From:

In 1937, a man moved to Eretz Yisroel with his wife and daughter. He bought some property in Bnei Brak and continued his business in the diamond trade. After a short while, he found that making a living was difficult so he left Eretz Yisroel and moved to Belgium with his family. Things improved somewhat, until World War II broke out. One morning, as he returned from the grocery store, he saw in horror how the SS had thrown his wife and daughter into a truck, and had driven away. He managed with great difficulty to escape Belgium and after many small miracles, he arrived in a fishing village on the coast of Portugal, with only the clothes on his back. He knocked on a door, and was taken in by the head of the village. Believing that his whole world had been destroyed, he became a fisherman, and settled into the village. He noticed how all the fisherman worked exhaustingly, but were all poor. All the fish profits were made by the wholesalers. He organized the fishermen and soon, their financial situation improved. After a number of years, he married the village chief's daughter, and sired a family. No one knew he was a Jew; he barely remembered it himself. When he reached the age of 75, he could no longer stay away, and visited Eretz Yisroel. While there, he sold the property that he had bought years before, but he did not want to give money from Eretz Yisroel to his gentile children. He gave half of it to distant relatives in Hertzlia and the other half was donated to renovate an old abandoned Shul in Portugal. It seems that for years, he had secretly visited the Shul's ruins, pouring out his heart over some torn pages of Tehilim that he had found there.
